Autoplay

Spin perception, not discs

1. Design an aesthetic and brand for your DJ alter ego
2. Come up with a playlist of crowd pleasing bops
3. Book a gig at a non-suspecting bar, club, or party
 - a. Call ahead and say you're your manager booking the "last leg of the tour"
 - b. Walk in on a random night and claim to be the DJ for that night
4. ????????
5. Profit (the gigs typically pay, in cash or drinks)

Confident body movement.

Bopping, dancing, bobbing, fist bumping, clapping-- it's all good!

Get moving and look like you're having a blast doing it

Astroturfing

Acquiring a following is faster than growing one.

Establish an Instagram and buy fake followers.

Be weary that you may need to buy likes on posts as well-- accounts with a high follower count but a disproportionately low number of likes on posts is suspicious.

Targeting

Find the perfect place to launch your fake DJ career.

The ideal venue:

- Established for the occasional DJ or open mic set
- Is in a low key yet artsy area (Bushwick/Brooklyn)
- Unassuming / apathetic staff
- Known for cheap drinks

Aesthetic

Everything from your dj name to your Instagram page to the poster flyer for the gig to your gig outfit all need to look cool

A tiny bit of actual music know how

Make a playlist ahead of time, or make three playlists sorted by ambient, poppy, hard, and latin (trust me).

Download a cheap DJ software like algoriddim djaypro, or got to Spotify's advanced settings and select the "crossfade" option.

The most important aspect for transitioning between songs is beatmatching. Transition from song to song by identifying which have similar tempo.

SONG⚡BPM

For example: george michael - faith (which is 96 BPM, by the way)
